Printware Introduces New Affordable iJetColor 1175C New Model Inkjet Press Utilizing HP's® Thermal Inkjet Printhead

ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA – May 17, 2024 – Printware introduces its third iJetColor1175 Model Press concurrent with Drupa this year. The new model iJetColor1175C, now commercially available, is a more affordable console-based unit based on its best-selling iJetColor 1175 Pro and the easy-to-use benchtop iJetColor 1175 providing more options for print, inplant and mail providers to profit with full-color envelopes.

The newest collaboration with HP incorporates HP Page-Wide Thermal inkjet technology, the iJetColor1175C offers fast, long running, and more economical envelope printing with a lower capital investment. All three iJetColor inkjet envelope presses use water-safe, fade-resistant, pigment-based inks for a wide range of print applications.

“The newest member of the iJetColor family continues our commitment to our customers to focus on great economics,” said Tim Murphy, president of Printware. “We now offer a trio of reliable, easy-to-use, HP-based envelope presses to fit any budget, without sacrificing quality.”

The iJetColor1175C handles difficult to feed envelopes and prints full-bleed landscape orientation on #10 envelopes. Its unique feeding/alignment system is accurate, reliable, and provides easy transitions between envelope sizes, all with a single operator.

“The iJetColor 1175C will be a big hit,” said Duane Smith, director manufacturing and service for Printware. “Customers want press-like speeds with full-color, print-on-demand capabilities, and they appreciate we offer options to fit their needs.”

iJetColor Press systems come with a Profit Predictor, expert training, professional installation, 24/7 support, and a “no finger pointing” quality guarantee.
